Principal fisheries: Brown trout, brook trout

Wiley Pond is a reclaimed pond that is managed for both brown trout and brook trout. The advantage of this management strategy is two fold. The stocking of legal size brook trout provide a 'fast' spring fishery while the brown trout are stocked in an attempt to 'carry-over' to provide an opportunity to catch larger fish.

Poor summer water quality compromises the brook trout population and may limit the number of brown trout that can survive the summer. Hornpout have become re-established, since the 1965 reclamation, also limiting the trout potential. Fish quality could be improved if Wiley Pond was once again reclaimed to eradicate the hornpout population.

Public access to Wiley Pond is in cooperation with the Boothbay Region Fish and Game Club.
